

Net neutrality is an important component of making America a free and open society where we can send and receive information and ideas from other states and countries if we so need. For the sake of everyone who is interested to learn, has ideas to share, and would like to further their education. Net neutrality needs to be regulated under Title II.

Anders Nyquist